UniRazak’s innovative teaching a plus point

UNIVERSITI Tun Abdul Razak (UniRazak) was established on Dec 18, 1997 as one of the first private universities in Malaysia.
Named after Malaysia’s second prime minister, the late Tun Abdul Razak Hussein, the university welcomed its first batch of 162 students in September 1998.
On Dec 21, 1998, the university was officially launched by Tun Abdul Razak’s eldest son, Datuk Seri Najib Razak, current prime minister and the then minister of education.
Since then, UniRazak has become one of the first private learning institutions in Malaysia to receive the Sirim certification of ISO 9001:2000.
Additionally, the university has been awarded the prestigious MSC-status certification, which is a testament to the university’s commitment in integrating technology and innovation in its teaching and learning techniques.
It is evident that although UniRazak is a relatively new university, it is rapidly establishing itself as a centre for education.
It views its responsibility of shaping the minds of the young and the intellectual leaders of tomorrow very seriously.

In its effort to produce competitive and capable graduates, the university constantly upgrades its syllabus in accordance to current and forecasted industry standards.
The university also implements innovative teaching methods to provide the best education possibilities for its students. While UniRazak aspires to render services of the highest quality, it is also highly accessible to the community.
Its Pintar Campus in Petaling Jaya, for example, is just 30 minutes away from the city of Kuala Lumpur and 45 minutes away from Kuala Lumpur International Airport.

The Razak Campus is strategically located in between the Golden Triangle and the central business district right in the centre of Kuala Lumpur.
These strategic locations ensure that our students have easy access to various public transportation systems to and from both our campuses.
