Unirazak stresses on quality

Universiti Tun Abdul Razak (Unirazak) was established in 1997 as one of the first private universities in Malaysia. Named after Malaysia’s second Prime Minister, the late Tun Abdul Razak, the university welcomed its first batch of 162 students in September 1998. On Dec 21, 1998, the university was officially launched by Abdul Razak’s eldest son, Datuk Seri Najib Tun Razak, the current Prime Minister of Malaysia and the then Education Minister.

Since then, Unirazak has become one of the first private learning institutions in Malaysia to receive the Sirim (national organisation of standardisation and quality) certification of ISO 9001:2000.

Additionally, the university has been awarded the prestigious MSC-status certification, which is a testament to its commitment in integrating technology and innovation in its teaching and learning techniques.

It is evident that although Unirazak is a relatively new university, it is rapidly establishing itself as a centre for education. It views its responsibility of shaping the minds of the young and the intellectual leaders of tomorrow very seriously.

While Unirazak aspires to render services of the highest quality, it is also highly accessible to the community. Its Pintar campus in Petaling Jaya, for example, is just 30 minutes away from the city of Kuala Lumpur and 45 minutes away from the Kuala Lumpur International Airport (KLIA).

The Razak campus is strategically located between the Golden Triangle and the Central Business District in the centre of Kuala Lumpur.

These strategic locations ensure that its students have easy access to various public transportation systems to and from both campuses.

With approximately 10,000 students studying in 62 academic programmes at the diploma, undergraduate and postgraduate levels, the university prides itself in developing relevant programmes to meet today’s and tomorrow’s needs.

Presently under the auspices of the Tun Abdul Razak Educational Foundation (Yayasan Pintar), Unirazak is embarking on the next crucial phase of its growth. Its vision is to become the leading institution in providing quality education and human capital in niche areas among emerging economies.

Unirazak also intends to enhance its cooperation and collaborative networks through strategic alliances with top-ranking international universities.
